Aim:

The Learners' Voices Series is a national learners' forum initiative that has involved thousands of learners across Scotland in creating an action agenda to revitalise non-formal lifelong, life-wide learning and to create a dialogue to help put non-formal learning on the policy agenda.

Learners' Voices is designed to challenge the citizens of Scotland to think differently about their learning and to consider the direction we should take in the future. Learners and key politicians have been engaged in making tough choices about what's important for non-formal adult learning.

The next event will focus on community broadcasting asking us to create the space to allow for some interesting and enlightening dialogue.

Audience:

This seminar will be of particular interest to learners, MSPs, learning providers, community radio broadcasters and media literacy organisations.
